How Soon is Now? The Politics of Interculture

12-13 of November in Stockholm at Södra teatern, Stockholm

Welcome to How Soon is Now? a conference which focuses on intercultural dialogue in a national, Nordic and European context. It aims to sum up conclusions and recommendations on all these levels both from the civil society and from the policymakers.

The conference is originally an initiative from the Swedish Ministry of Culture in connection with the Swedish chairmanship in the Nordic Council of Ministers, The European Year of Intercultural Dialogue and the civil society represented by The Rainbow platform (European level) and The Nordic forum for interculture (Nordic level). Representatives from all these organisations and networks will be present at the conference.

However this is not an exclusively cultural affair. The conference will also address issues like democracy, human rights, multilingualism, media and education.

This is an opportunity to meet, listen and talk to practitioners, policymakers, artists and look forward. How Soon is Now? also includes the theatre performance Head On based on the award winning film by Fatih Akin, a guided tour of Restore Hope by Selda Asal, meals and a nightclub arranged by Re:Orient.
